

Cloud Computing Architectures, Distributed Microservices, and ML Systems

Modern enterprise infrastructure utilizes Kubernetes container orchestration, Docker virtualization, serverless compute functions, and API gateway routing. Software developers deploy low-latency backend architectures programmed in Python, Rust, and Go, leveraging GPU hardware accelerators and high-throughput network fabrics across global data centers. Database systems utilize distributed key-value storage, Apache Kafka event streams, and automated continuous integration pipelines.